VI. INDEPENDENT STUDENTS

A.

[REDACTED] that there would be off-campus newspapers on each of the high school campuses in the Long Beach area. [REDACTED] obtained a copy of CAT'S CROWL at Jordan High School on 18 September 1968. The newspaper dealt with the need for an "underground" newspaper.

D.

- C. According to [REDACTED], the first edition of LOUD MOUTH appeared on 20 March 1967 as an unofficial off-campus newspaper at Wilson High School. In June of the same year, the name changed to LOUD SQUEAKER; however, the name was again changed to LOUD MOUTH. Michael Lee LUCAS, 2120 Clark, Long Beach, is the editor of the LOUD MOUTH which, in 1967, was printed at the Long Beach Peace Center (often known as Students for Democracies Society Center), 2628 East Anaheim. From its inception, according to [REDACTED] the newspaper has followed the "get out of Vietnam" line and claimed censorship of official high school publications as a reason for its existence. In August 1967, according to [REDACTED] met with twelve other editors of off-campus newspapers at a meeting sponsored by the Western Behavioral Sciences Institute, La Jolla. As a result of that meeting, all editors from various underground newspapers have formed what they call "Student Underground Press Association".
